On the 25th of this month occurs that much dreaded epoch, the perihelion of Jupiter. It is to this cause that the astronomers attribute the recent great storms and other atmospheric phenomena.

There was never a summer season, perhaps, in the history of the E. T. V. & G. railroad that they have had as heavy and profitable a business, in the freight line especially, as during the season just coming to a close. It has almost always been customary to run local freights only every day, on the lower end of the road, during the summer, owing to the light business. This time not a single train on many has been taken off, but, on the contrary, it has frequently been necessary to run extra trains, and double trains are run on every schedule, sometimes three sections.

YOUNG REPUBLICANS.

Permanent Organization of the Central Garfield and Arthur Club.

The Roll Swelled to 504. Speeches by Wheeler and Hook.

There was another season of enthusiasm and fervor in the republican ranks hereabouts last night, and the campaign just entered upon was given a decided boost which presages victory all along the line. It was the second meeting of the young men's central Garfield and Arthur club, organized a week ago. The wave was set in motion by the blazing of a large bonfire of barrels, and sending up of fire works in front of "republican headquarters," in the opera house building. The colored brass band also marched down the street in full blast, and a very large crowd was collected. Before the hour for the meeting to open the large hall was crowded with an intelligent, respectable and creditable audience, and the band furnished some music.

The house was called to order by temporary chairman John C. Hook, and the first business was the report of the committee on permanent organization, appointed at the last meeting. The report was read by H. T. Cooper, chairman, and adopted, and is as follows:

Recording Secretary—J. A. Swan, A. E. T. Dropper, assistant. Corresponding Secretary—D. T. Hickey, J. Harvey Carson, assistant. Treasurer—S. H. Johnson.

Sergeant-at-Arms—W. F. Gibbs, John A. Reeder and Sam Anderson, assistants.

The campaign song, "Red, white and blue," was then executed an excellent manner by the glee club, composed of Messrs. A. R. Humes, Wm. M. Baxter, J. W. Searles, George Andrews and W. P. Chamberlain, with Mr. Thos. P. Richards at the organ.

Hon. Xen Wheeler, of Chattanooga, was introduced and made a brief and most excellent speech in support of republican principles.

He began by stating that it is generally conceded that parties are necessary, though he had always been at a loss to discover the use for the democratic party. It is, to a great extent, parties and not men, he said, the young men about took to in making up their minds as to casting their first vote. I matter not how good a man is elected president, he is governed in his acts by the party electing him. The purposes, objects and character of parties is the real test. Any party to the republicans and it is able to stand the severest test.

The first great achievement of the republican party was the saving of the union, which the democracy attempted to destroy. He had heard that it is claimed by some speakers hereabouts, among them a democratic candidate for congress, that the democratic party saved the union. This was certainly news to him and gave the lie to all the writings of history for the past 20 years.

The speaker produced a table of figures showing the gradual and steady decrease, by wise republican legislation, of the national debt, incurred by the last democratic administration and increased by a democratic rebellion, which he pronounced a much graver achievement than saving the union even. The great and beneficial results from the operations of the resumption act, passed by republicans and bitterly opposed by democrats, who are now falsely claiming the honor, was next treated. He told many of the hardships all over the land, suffered and even today is suffering from, and pointed out the power and influence of the republicans in its enforcement. When the fluently uttered the great prosperity and beauty of the land which followed, the democrats denied that the republican party had anything to do with it, but devoutly thanked God, saying it was all due to Providence. He was glad to know that party had effected a change, got religion. In this connection he related the parable of the Pharisees and the blind man restored to sight by Christ, and applied it with splendid effect.

Taking these grand achievements into consideration, the speaker could advise the young men of the country that there is no party with which they can more wisely cast their votes than the republican.

"Ring, Ring the Bells" was rendered by the glee club. H. T. Cooper announced that Hon. Horace Maynard will arrive in Knoxville the last of next week, and moved, which was carried by a rousing vote, that this club join in tendering the distinguished gentleman a fitting reception. Music by the band.

Judge L. C. Hook, in response to loud calls, appeared and made an able and effective speech.

After some preliminary remarks, he offered an explanation to the democratic claim of the general prosperity being the work solely of Providence, that God and the republican party had no way worked in harmony, some wicked brother, he said, suggested that the devil and the democracy were always equally as harmonious.

It had been circulated about Knoxville, he said, that he (the speaker) had been hit out. Well, perhaps he had, but a wrong impression prevailed as to the reason of it. The true reason, he said, is that he was afraid he would have to tell about the transactions of some of the leading democrats of Knoxville in ransacking the mails and opening up men's letters during the war. That was all he had to say on that subject.

We all see, he said, what a dirty, slimy fight the democrats are attempting to make in this section. If that was their game, he said, he wouldn't begin it, but if they want to open it, "Lord, how I will wade into them!"

He read an extract about the difficulty of getting pensions for union soldiers through the present democratic congress, and commented briefly on the indications and tendencies.

He related his experience in a recent brief tour through northern states, where he found republicans everywhere, confident and hopeful. Vermont has spoken, with 27,000 majority, or more, a large increase. Maine will speak next week—that is now given up by the democrats—and next month Indiana will roll up not less than 100 majority for the republicans. He also read newspaper extracts showing wholesale desertions from the democracy to bear out this prophecy.

Talk about the democrats saving the union, said the speaker. What prominent democrats about here saved the union? Did Col. Crozier? Did Bill Henderson? Did George Washington? Did Marks, with his leg lost in the rebel army; Wilson, the repudiator, arm lost the same way; Gen. Wright a rebel brigadier; did any of these save the union? But there is Fayette Ledgerwood, he had forgotten him. He is the man who saved the union, and the speaker is thankful to him for it. [Loud and continued applause.]

The speaker congratulated the young men on their auspicious beginning and expressed entire confidence in the result in November.

A voice—"Tell us about Mr. Charlton." The judge replied that it was too late then to tell him he knows about him, but he promised to pay his respects to him to his entire satisfaction later in the campaign.

In referring to state matters, he said Hawkins is bound to win for governor, and we must put forward the very best men for the legislature and give a rousing victory for the republican ticket and state credit and we are sure of success.

Both speakers were listened to with the closest attention and greeted with rounds of applause.

The glee club sang "While we're waiting for Garfield" excellently.

On motion of H. T. Cooper, a vote of thanks was tendered Miss Annie Brownlow and Mrs. George L. Maloney for some beautiful flowers which adorned the speaker's desk. It was also moved and carried that this club alternate with the original old men's club in weekly meetings, and that Hon. Horace Maynard be requested to furnish his picture for the club room.

On motion, Friday night, October 29th, was fixed upon as the time for the final grand rally and torch light procession of the campaign.

The club then adjourned, the next meeting to be held Friday night of next week by the old men's club in the same hall.

It was announced before the close of the meeting that 188 new names had been added to the club during the evening, swelling the roll of membership now to 504 members.

Democratic Rally.

Our democratic friends, witnessing the enthusiasm prevailing about "republican headquarters" last night, determined upon trying to keep even. They kindled a large bonfire at the corner of Gay and Main streets, had the new Hancock band in attendance and gathered a large crowd at their headquarters, where the central Hancock and English club met, with the president, Peter Staub, in the chair. Music was furnished by the band and by the quartette, Messrs. E. W. Crozier, H. H. Ingersoll, F. B. Kirkpatrick and J. S. Boyd, Jr., singing "Ring the bells for Hancock" and "Who killed Jim Garfield," the latter by request.

It was announced that Hon. A. H. Stephens declined to address the club on account of his health. A question of changing the night of meeting was referred to the executive committee.

The club was then addressed at much length by R. P. Toole, Esq., and afterwards by Judge H. H. Ingersoll, who was most brief. In his remarks he said if the democrats are not very careful Hawkins will be governor. He asked if the democrats had forgotten when a republican congressman at large was elected in Tennessee.

Loud calls were made for "Dixie," which was given by the band and received with enthusiastic yells, and the meeting adjourned.

Capt. H. H. Taylor, of this city, and Col. R. M. Williams, of New York, were announced to speak on Thursday next.

It was also announced that the 2nd ward democrats will meet to organize at the headquarters to-night.

The rapidly increasing popularity of DAY'S KIDNEY PAD is due solely to its intrinsic merit.

THE CINCINNATI INDUSTRIAL EXPOSITION.

A Grand Display—Low Rates Over the Railroads.

Our readers will remember seeing an advertisement in our paper of the Cincinnati industrial exposition, which opened on Wednesday, the 8th inst. We were present on the opening day, and took a look through the spacious halls and witnessed one of the grandest displays we have ever seen. The floral display alone will repay any lover of the beautiful the small amount it costs to visit Cincinnati now under the liberal rates established by the Cincinnati Southern railroad. The exhibit in this department is beyond all description, and a person can pass a day in the floral department alone with great pleasure and profit. The machinery hall is worth seeing, and those mechanically inclined can get much profit from a visit. You can see there almost every kind of machinery in operation, from a silk loom to a two hundred horse power engine, and everything working in perfect order. The results of the different industrial pursuits of Cincinnati, and as for that matter, of the state, can be seen in every department of the exposition buildings, and even other states are well represented. We notice the Knoxville marble company have on show some very fine specimens of their marble, and the agent of the Cincinnati Southern railroad has gathered up for display a very large collection of Tennessee marble, iron ore, and the different kinds of timber in which the country abounds along the line of the railroad. Yet Tennessee has no done her duty in this respect. A country as rich in mineral and marble wealth as this section and desiring to come into closer connection with Cincinnati and the markets of the country, should have seen to it that her resources were properly set before the people, and in no way could this have been better accomplished than by sending a rich collection to the Cincinnati industrial exposition. The management of the Cincinnati Southern railroad have decided to run a special excursion train from Chattanooga to Cincinnati on Tuesday of each week, and the second train will leave next Tuesday morning, the 14th inst., and passengers can obtain round trip tickets from Knoxville to Cincinnati for the exceedingly small sum of $12.75, less than half fare, good until the following Sunday. It will certainly repay those of our citizens who have not visited Cincinnati yet, to take advantage of those low rates and visit the exposition. The accommodations on the road are first class, as every one who has ever traveled over the road can testify, and we can assure all a pleasant trip, and that none will regret the small amount expended.
